MORNING SESSION

House Chamber
State Capitol
Salt Lake City, Utah
January 18, 1999

Pursuant to the provision of the Constitution of the State of Utah, Members of the House of Representatives of the Fifty-Third Legislature of the State of Utah met in General Session in the House Chamber at the State Capitol at 10:00 a.m.

The House was called to order by Former Speaker Melvin R. Brown at 10:00 a.m.

PRAYER BY ELDER MARLIN K. JENSEN, THE CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER-DAY SAINTS

Our Father in Heaven, on this day commemorating the life of Dr. Martin Luther King and in this final year of an unequaled millennium we unite in prayer at the commencement of this 1999 Legislative Session. And on this occasion Heavenly Father we feel to acknowledge Thy hand in all of our earthly endeavors and to express our sincere appreciation to Thee for our bounteous blessings. We are grateful to be Americans and to live in this exceptional State. We thank Thee for the rich human and natural resources that abound here. We appreciate our heritage of thrift and industry and faith. On this occasion we pray particularly for the Legislators and Senators who in coming days will deliberate and enact the laws that govern our State. We thank Thee for them and pray for them and their families and pray that all that occurs here will be attended by a spirit of cooperation and civility and non-partisanship. We pray that significant progress will be made during this session toward solving the challenges that face our state on many fronts. And we pray particularly that the family life of our state will be strengthened and enhanced through the legislative action that is taken. Heavenly Father we acknowledge our dependence on Thee and pray for forgiveness of our collective and individual failings. We ask Thee for help in being people of greater integrity and being stronger in our stand for truth and righteousness. We particularly pray that all that proceeds here will contribute to the success of our democratic system and that each of us will be a party to that by laying aside our self interests and by heeding the Golden Rule as taught by Thy matchless Son. For these things we pray this morning and we do so in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen

REMARKS BY SPEAKER MARTIN R. STEPHENS

First of all I would like to thank the Fremont High School Choir for coming down and participating in this great day, historical day in the history of the State of Utah. And I'd also like to thank a good friend Elder Marlin Jensen for offering the invocation today. Elder Jensen and I met probably, oh, it's probably been close to twenty years now on a basketball court up in Weber County and I've had the chance to have a good relationship and association ever since and I appreciate him taking the time here to be with us today. I'd also like to thank the Utah National Guard for their taking care of the colors.

I have a lot of family and friends that have come today. I'd like to introduce a few of them specifically if I may. My family is sitting on the back row here, if they would stand. I'd especially like to thank my wife Carol. What a pleasure she is in my life. My sons Matthew Daniel next to his mother and Spencer. And I'm lucky this year to have my daughter Melanie serving as my page so she'll be up here on the stand with me this session. Should be fun. She'll be able to keep me in line. I also have a brother and two sisters, many nieces and nephews, my mother and father-in-law and others that are here, I just want them to know family is very important in our life and I just want them to know how much I appreciate them being here today.

It's a great honor to have the opportunity to serve as your speaker for the next two years. I thank you and I pledge my best efforts at making sure this house is well run and dignified in it's handling of the State's business. This is a memorable day for all of us. Whether you are here as a new Legislator or a veteran of many years you cannot come into this historical building without feeling a sense of responsibility and honor which flows from these halls. I remember as a new legislator sitting right down there on the second row where Representative Holladay is and raising my right arm to the square and taking the oath of office. I remember thinking how honored and inadequate I felt that day. What a great honor the people of my community had given me in electing me to represent them here in these hallowed halls. That feeling has never waned. I still to this day cannot begin a session of the legislature without a reverential sense of history, without thinking of the great men and women who previously served in this chamber.

I have here today the gavel of William M. Roylance. It's difficult to see but it has the names of all the representatives that served under Representative Roylance in the 1899-1900 Session of the Utah Legislature. Exactly 100 years ago. His grandson William Roylance Turner and his wife Clara brought this gavel here for me to use today. Mr. Turner and Clara would you please stand and receive the recognition of this body? One hundred years ago Speaker Roylance could not have known what lay ahead for this great state. He could not have envisioned the marvels of technology which we enjoy today. But he and his colleagues did know some things that have not changed: the basic principles of our government. We the people of the United States in order to form a more perfect union, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution of the United States of America. Thus begins the greatest governmental document ever written. The Constitution of the United States beautifully prescribes and enumerates our God-given rights. The protection of these rights is our basic responsibility as legislators. On this holiday, Human Rights Day, we honor those men and women both in our country and around the world who have gone before, giving their utmost, even their lives, to protecting these freedoms we enjoy.

I recently finished the autobiography of Nelson Mandela. Most of you, I'm sure, are aware of his role in the fight for basic human rights in South Africa. Mr. Mandela dedicated his whole life to the fight for freedom for the black South Africans. Let me quote briefly from his book at a time while he was on the run as an underground resistor to the white government. "On June 26, 1961, our freedom day, I released a letter to South African newspapers from underground, which commended the people for their courage during the recent stay-at-home. Once more calling for a National Constitutional Convention. My letter read in part 'I am informed that a warrant for my arrest has been issued and that the police are looking for me. The National Action Council has given full and serious consideration to this question and they have advised me not to surrender myself. I have chosen this choice which is more difficult and which entails more risk and hardship than sitting in jail. I've had to separate myself from my wife and my dear children, from my mother and sisters, to live as an outlaw in my own land. I've had to close my business, to abandon my profession, and to live in poverty as many of my people are doing. I shall fight the government, side by side with you, inch by inch and mile by mile, until victory is won. What are you going to do? Will you come along with us? For my own part, I have made my choice. I will not leave South Africa nor will I surrender. The struggle is my life. I will continue fighting for freedom until the end of my days.'"

Nelson Mandela was a short time later caught by the government and held in prison for over 20 years. However, he fought on and eventually lived not only to see the freedom of his people but to serve as the first elected black president of South Africa in May of 1994. Martin Luther King, Jr., fought a similar fight right here in these United States. He was preceded in his fight here by one of our great presidents, who did as Dr. King, gave up his life for this cause. Abraham Lincoln was determined that the inhuman practice of slavery would be stopped. In his Gettysburg Address he summed up the feelings of the nation as follows:

"Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth, on this continent, a new nation, conceived in liberty and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal. Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation, so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war. We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that this nation might be. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this but, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate, we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here, have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here. It is for us, the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced. It is rather for us here dedicated, to the great task remaining before us, that from these honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion. That we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain, that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom, and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people, shall not perish from the earth.”

Many people of renown have given their lives in the cause of protecting human rights, as did President Mandela, Dr. King, and President Lincoln. Even our great state was founded by those seeking to be free to worship the Almighty God according to the dictates of their own conscience. Many traveled over a thousand miles to a new and desolate area simply to be able to exercise the basic human right of freedom of religion. Today, we stand on the eve of a new millennium. How will those that sit in these seats one hundred years from today look on our actions? Will we be honored for protecting and ensuring that those who come after us continue to share in the American dream? I suggest that we here today, as stewards of the public trust, have five basic responsibilities to fulfill, and I would submit the following:

1. To understand our constitutional duties and forebear from exceeding those duties. How long has it been since we read both the national and state constitutions? Do we feel comfortable drawing a line on our authority based on those rights reserved to the people?

2. To protect individual rights and freedoms. We hold the future of this great land in our hands. Will individual rights continue to be respected and protected, or will we allow a gradual erosion of those rights and responsibilities to government?

3. To provide the basic services of government, which are prescribed by our national and state constitutions. Before we can provide those basic services, we need to recognize what they are so proper limits can be set. We then should do our best to provide for our citizens what our duty requires.

4. To minimize the amount of taxes extracted from the citizens of our state, while providing for those basic services. We must recognize every time we take additional money from our citizens, whether through taxes, fees, or assessments, we are taking away some of their rights. They no longer have the right to use their money, that they earned, the way that they desire. They must now give more to us to use as we see fit. We must be very careful stewards of our citizens’ resources.

5. To protect equity in the marketplace. Manipulating the marketplace or the economy is a great temptation for government. We do have a proper role in the marketplace, but that role is limited to providing a level field of competition. To favor one business over another through tax incentives or exemptions, or to provide some statutory advantage, is a natural temptation, but must be resisted. Nowhere does the Constitution give us the right to take resources from one citizen to give to another to provide that which they can and should provide for themselves. Nowhere does it give us the right to take from our citizens to give money to groups, even for charitable purposes, who could and should be raising money for themselves. Nowhere does the Constitution give us the right to justify such expenditures because of their comparable size. A small, unwarranted expenditure is still unwarranted and must be guarded against. We must remember, we don't have any money to spend up here except what we take from the citizens of this state. It's not our money, it's theirs, and we owe it to them to be wise stewards of it.

These are principles that have not changed in the hundred years since this gavel was last used. They are principles that we must be faithful in protecting. Losing our freedoms from an outside attack, from some foreign nation, is currently not a real threat. What is a real threat is losing our freedoms from within. Jonathan Elliott, in his compilation of debates in the several states prior to the ratification of the United States Constitution, records this entry:

“I believe there are more instances of the abridgement of the freedom of the people by gradual and silent encroachment from those in power than by violent and sudden usurpation. This danger out to be widely guarded against.”

Eugene Holman put it this way: “There is a price tag on human liberty. That price tag is the willingness to assume the responsibility of being free men.” Payment of this price is a personal matter with each of us. To let others carry the responsibilities of freedom and the work and worry that accompany them, while we share in the benefits, may be a very human impulse, but is likely to be fatal. We are and must be protectors of human liberty in our state. We must be every vigilant and watchful of the encroachment of government into what is and ought to be the private lives and the God-given rights of our citizens. If freedoms are lost, we are to blame. With this great opportunity to serve comes the great responsibility to protect, to be stewards of the rights which made America great. In conclusion, let me add one more thing. As we go about our work here, we must respect the opinions and ideas of all. Everyone must feel free to express their opinions without fear of ridicule or disdain. Everyone must feel that they have been treated fairly, even if their ideas or bills have been rejected by a majority. One of the great assets of this state is the goodness of its people. Alex deToqueville, the great French historian and social commentator, had this to say about America after having spent several years here learning about our country.

“I sought for the greatness and genius of America in her commodious harbors and her ample rivers, and it was not there. In her fertile fields and boundless prairies, and it was not there. In her rich mines and her vast world commerce, and it was not there. Not until I went to the churches of America and heard her pulpit, aflame with righteousness, did I understand the secret of her genius and power. America is great because she is good, and if America ever ceases to be good, America will cease to be great.”

May we seek for the goodness in our society; may we use that goodness to encourage and support correct principles in our interactions with government; and may we fulfil with honor our charge as legislators to protect the basic rights of the citizens of this great country, is my fervent prayer. Thank you.

COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE

On motion of Representative Garn, the House resolved itself into a Committee of the Whole, with the Speaker as Chairman, for the purpose of a Martin Luther King, Jr./Human Rights Holiday Commission presentation.

On motion of Representative Garn, the Committee of the Whole was dissolved.

MISCELLANEOUS BUSINESS

On motion of Representative Jones, the remarks of the Martin Luther King, Jr./Human Rights Holiday Commission were printed upon the pages of the House Journal.

DAVID WINDER

Today we remember all those who have been instrumental in spreading human rights to all mankind, particularly Martin Luther King who showed America the non-violent way. Dr. King said, when accepting the Nobel Peace Prize, "We must evolve, for all human conflict, a method which rejects revenge, aggression, and retaliation. The foundation of such a method is love."

When giving credit to his exemplars, Dr. King said "Christ gave me my mission - Ghandi gave me my method." The mission Christ gave Dr. King, of course, was to love – the great commandment to love others as oneself. In fact, treating others as oneself is an important part of all of the world's significant religions. The method Mahatma Gandhi gave Dr. King was resisting violence – seeking to defeat injustice, not seeking to defeat people.

Gandhi is best known for leading hundreds of millions of his countrymen in India to independence from the largest empire in history, the British Empire, without the use of violence. Gandhi gave us something else, too. It was the teaching that our society should stress a commitment to personal responsibility even more than insistence upon rights.

This has become a problem for us today in our society. We live in a society that emphasizes rights – majority rights, minority rights – employers, employees, victims, criminals all remind us of their rights. Indeed, central to the social, political and legal fabric of the United States is the Bill of Rights. Putting fundamental human rights into law is an essential safeguard against the corrupting influences of power and human weakness as manifested in bigotry and prejudice. However, focusing on rights as the basis of conduct and policy is to create a society that is driven by advocacy and confrontation, leading to a loss of community and reducing the motivation to work for the common good.

Focusing on our responsibilities, on the other hand, creates a society that promotes service, tolerance, compromise, and progress, and it removes the mindset of taking something without making a contribution in return. Gandhi insisted that those being denied their rights also had to meet their responsibilities. Looking at the world through the lens of personal responsibility creates a landscape of hard work, high standards, commitment to service, and compassion – it is important that we teach this to our children.

H.G. Wells once asked for Gandhi's views on a document Wells had authored entitled "Rights of Man." Gandhi did not agree with the document's emphasis on rights. His response said: "I suggest that a better way is to begin with a charter of duties of man and I promise the rights will follow as surely as winter is followed by spring.

Gandhi asked us to remember that our rights are inalienable, our responsibility is indisputable. It is given to us by every religion and culture – to treat others as ourselves. Gandhi's opponents and Dr. King's opponents were always treated as they would like to be treated, with courtesy and respect. If we keep a focus on our responsibilities as our ideal and try to move towards it, we reduce the emphasis on rights and bring personal responsibility to a higher level in guiding our thoughts and actions.

Perhaps all of us in public service should adopt this as one of our mottos – that if our rights are inalienable, our responsibility to treat others as we would have them treat us is indisputable. Let us remember this as we debate legislation and as we serve our citizens in the days ahead, and let us all do those things and pass those laws that, over the long term, will foster love and good relations between all our peoples, and will encourage them to take responsibility as well as insisting upon their rights.

JOAN SMITH

This is a day of remembering, remembering a man who led us in a movement for civil rights. What does Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. mean to me, a white woman? To me this day reminds me of Hope. HOPE that we can embrace each other with respect, regardless of our differences. Hope that we do not repeat the ideas or actions of: “you may not drink at this fountain, you may not use this restroom, you may not stay at this hotel, you may not use this entrance, you may not eat at this counter.” Sometimes we forget those actions of exclusion and discrimination and we say only – English only.

Dr. King gave me hope that we can live up the reputation of America being the country founded on the principles of open doors and ample opportunities – equal opportunities. That we are populated by people who have the courage to pull themselves up from economic hardship to create a better life for themselves and their families. With the exception of Native or First Americans, almost everyone of us can trace our roots to a time when those who carried our blood walked on different soil. We are all immigrants.

Dr. King gave me hope that someday we will judge people not by the color of their skin or the language they speak, but by the content of their character. Dr. King gave me hope and the knowledge that if I want to protect my rights, I must work hard to protect the rights of others. It is too bad that we cannot legislate respect and understanding. Looking at this body of leadership it is my hope that someday we will embrace leaders who reflect the changing face of our community. Dr. King gave me hope that if we are persistent enough, patient enough, and respectful enough we will solve our problems and our differences in a non-violent manner.

These are not shallow or sentimental words, but a dream and a vision; a vision that we need to continually put before the American people that the country’s best leadership is on the side of respect, understanding and good will between people of divergent kinds and creeds. We in Utah choose to call this Human Rights Day. We need to ask ourselves if we can and do accept other human beings as they are. Does the color of their skin, whether black, yellow, red, brown or white in any way effect us by accepting, hesitating or rejection? Are we apt to accept and feel more comfortable with someone of our own faith even though we may not know that person? I am inclined to believe that most of us are apt to make these unconscious judgements without thinking or analyzing what we are doing. Are we looking at labels such as Jew or gentile, Republican or Democrat, straight, gay or lesbian? Do we look first at their labels or do we seek to know what is in their hearts and minds. I believe we need to ask ourselves these questions everyday if we are to live beside our fellow human being in peace and justice.

Today, I thank Dr. King for giving this white woman hope. Hope that my children and grandchildren can be bi-lingual or even perhaps tri-lingual; and that when they have differences of the mind or heart that they will agree to disagree agreeably; That they will only judge their fellow humans by the content of the character; and that they will remember that the ONE thing we all have in common is our humanity and on that alone we need to give respect to and understanding of one another.

Good afternoon Mr. Speaker, my colleagues, staff, and guests who have assembled here this afternoon; it is truly a pleasure to have the opportunity to speak to you on Human Rights Day. I want to thank Sandra Adams, Mrs. Valdez, and the Human Rights Commission for all their hard work and effort they give to the state 365 days a year. Before I start, I want to commend our Speaker for reaching out to the Commission to plan this day. I feel this was a real step forward. Thanks again; your leadership is appreciated.

Martin Luther King, Jr., Human Rights Day is an inclusive holiday. Mr. King dedicated his life to helping freedom exist for all people. We need to remember the life, work, and dream of Dr. King. We also need to remember those that are less fortunate and those who gave their lives in the struggle for civil rights. We need to celebrate in the true spirit of togetherness and community and, most importantly, let the holiday be a catalyst for individuals, families, and organizations to act. Colleagues and citizens of this state: I challenge you to adopt the six principles of nonviolence and six steps for nonviolent social change. We should live by these principles, not only on Martin Luther King and Human Rights Day, but 365 days a year. We need to act, to live the dream, by serving the causes of equality, justice, freedom, and peace. Nonviolence is a way of live for courageous people; nonviolence seeks to win friendship and understanding. Nonviolence seeks to defeat injustice, not people. Nonviolence holds that suffering can educate and transform. Nonviolence chooses love instead of hate. Nonviolence believes that the universe is on the side of justice. Six steps for nonviolent social change: information gathering, education, personal commitment, negotiation, direct action, reconciliation.

We've come a long way from the civil rights movement. Today I want to tell the State of Utah that I am not turning back and that I will continue to fight. I hope each and every one of you will as well. We still have a lot of work to do in our state and our country. When all races and nationalities can live together and be safe; when there is no racism; when no man or woman is walking the streets hungry; where there is no violence. As an important step for self-examination and self-worth, identify the negative stereotypes you personally hold for different racial, religious, and ethnic groups. A knowledge or lack of information and this end of misinformation that you have internalized leading to those negative stereotypes. Pledge to stop using those stereotypes in conversation with family and friends and, most importantly, when others use those stereotypes, let them know you disagree and disapprove of such language.

For all of us today, the battle is in our hands. The road ahead is not altogether a smooth one. There are no broad highways to lead us easily and inevitably to quick solutions; we must keep going. As we go away this afternoon, let us go away more than ever committed to the struggle and committed to nonviolence. I must admit to you there are still difficulties ahead. We will go on with the faith in nonviolence and its powers transform dark yesterdays into bright tomorrows. We must come to see that the end we seek is a society at peace with itself; a society that can live with its conscience. That will be a day, not of the white man or woman, not of the black man or black woman. That will be the day that we are viewed as one. I would like to see Martin Luther King added to the Human Rights Day holiday. Second, I would like to adequately fund the Commission so it could work full time on this effort. Third, I would like Human Rights Day to be done by statute instead of by executive order.

In closing, I ask that you reach out to your neighbor, educate our children, and remember love, not hate. I bid you all a pleasant good afternoon.
